ECONOMIC OUTLOOK

Markets were broadly stable in the third quarter of 2021. The S&P 500 Index rose by 0.58% while the MSCI ACWI Islamic Index fell by -0.81. Both indices were up 15.92% and 10.71%, respectively, year-to-date.

Bullish market sentiment in the first two quarters of 2021 continued into the third with the S&P 500 and MSCI Islamic rising by 5.49% and 2.96%, respectively, from June 30 to August 31 (during which both indices also hit all-time highs). Strong corporate results boosted investor sentiment, especially in the US, with more than 80% of the companies in the S&P 500 reporting positive earnings surprises. This illustrated that a post-pandemic economic recovery was well and truly underway.

Positive market momentum in the first two months of the quarter hit a wall at the end of August and then weakened. September proved to be considerably trickier for equity investors. Solvency worries at China's largest property developer China Evergrande emerged, sparking concerns of another Lehman-style global financial crisis just as Federal Reserve officials signaled a readiness to begin tapering, possibly before the end of the year. Sentiment further worsened by spiking energy prices which caused global power shortages, especially in China, where a significant manufacturing shutdown could further impact global supply chain disruptions, pushing up inflation and encouraging earlier-than-expected tightening of monetary policy. Not surprisingly, markets closed the quarter on a weak note with S&P 500 returning -4.65 and MSCI Islamic returning -3.66% for the month of September.

Notwithstanding recent market weakness, benchmark valuations remained elevated at 21.3x P/E (against a five-year median of 18.5x) for the S&P 500 and 19.4x P/E (five-year median of 17.3x) for MSCI Islamic. With markets continuing to face a wall of worry and earnings growth expected to slow down following an initial post-pandemic pop, sentiment and share prices are likely to remain volatile.

In this type of investing environment, we remain convinced that our bottom-up investing approach—focused on finding companies with solid fundamentals, sound growth prospects, and reasonable valuations—should continue to deliver resilient investment performance compared with macro-based or other investment styles. As sustainability and Shariah-focused investors, we also are well positioned to capitalize on growing ESG awareness across global investors.
