ECONOMIC OUTLOOK

Emerging markets continued to lag in the first quarter of 2022 with the MSCI Emerging Markets Index down -6.97% and MSCI Asia Pacific Index declining -5.93% as of March 31, 2022. However, the MSCI ASEAN Index bucked the trend and rose 2.72% during the quarter, with all regional indices gaining except for Vietnam. As a direct beneficiary of US-China tensions and high commodity prices, the region may start to see rising investor interest.

Our outlook remains unchanged as we expect sentiment and share prices to remain volatile. On one hand, valuations would be supported by continued global economic recovery as the world moves toward accepting COVID-19 as endemic. On the other hand, central banks would have to walk a tightrope in their efforts to prevent runaway inflation without stymying growth – all this against the backdrop of a geopolitically fractured world and potentially lengthy supply chain disruptions, none of which are conducive for growth. In this type of environment, companies that succeed will be those best able to navigate higher inflation and interest rates. Stock selection will become even more important for the success of any equity portfolio.

This fits well with our bottom-up investing approach, which is focused on finding companies with solid fundamentals, strong competitive positions, positive free cash flows, sound growth prospects, and reasonable valuations. Additionally, the ASEAN Equity Fund, which is a sustainability and Shariah-focused fund, prioritizes companies with low debt and a penchant for doing right by their stakeholders. All these factors should facilitate resilient portfolio performance, especially as ESG awareness increases within the region.
