ECONOMIC OUTLOOK

There were two distinct periods in the third quarter of 2022. The S&P 500 Index rallied 13.94% from June 30 to August 16, but then fell over -16% during the following six weeks, finishing the quarter at -4.88%. The MSCI All Country World Index followed a similar trend, declining -6.71% over the quarter.

The third quarter was all about investors trying to read the interest rate tea leaves. Markets rallied in July on stronger-than-expected corporate earnings and commentary by Federal Reserve Chair Jerome Powell that the pace of US monetary policy tightening may ease after the Fed raised interest rates by 75 basis points (bps) that month. This came against a backdrop of softening growth; US gross domestic product (GDP) fell by -0.9% on an annualised basis as June inflation came in above consensus. While inflation eased in July, prices remained elevated overall across a broad range of categories, providing investors with reason to be cautious. Market sentiment soured further after August inflation clocked in at 8.3%, above the consensus expectations of 8.1%. The Fed subsequently raised interest rates by another 75 bps.

In Europe, stock prices broadly followed the ebbs and flows of the US market. With eurozone inflation rising to a high of 10% in September, the European Central Bank raised its benchmark rate from -0.5% as of June 30 to 0.75% as of September 30. Meanwhile, the ongoing European energy crisis, especially with the recent damage done to the Nord Stream pipelines, did not help matters. As a result, the STOXX Europe 600 Index was down -4.24% during the quarter.

Emerging markets were also very weak in the third quarter. The MSCI Emerging Markets Index was down -11.57% and the MSCI Asia Pacific Index was down -11.03%. This was mainly due to weakness in China, which experienced solvency issues across its Real Estate sector and demand downturns due to strict COVID-19 lockdown measures.

Central banks will have to continue fighting inflation while keeping an eye on growth. It appears that the former will be prioritised, and the latter will be sacrificed. Sentiment and stock prices will likely remain volatile with a downward bias as global economies begin to contract and corporate earnings soften.
