

ECONOMIC OUTLOOK

ASEAN valuations remain attractive, with the MSCI ASEAN Index trading at only a 14.9x price-earnings (P/E) ratio compared with its 10-year median of 15.6x and a solid medium-term earnings per share compound annual growth rate of 14.1%. Additionally, the region's estimated dividend yield of 4% compares very favorably with its historical median of 3.3%, the S&P 500 Index's 1.4% and MSCI All Country World Index's 2%.

Malaysia

Key market drivers included the surpassing of the government's second quarter 5.8% gross domestic product growth (GDP) projection, a strong finance sector, solid construction industry performance buoyed by optimism around domestic data center/infrastructure projects, and foreign investor fund inflows aided by expectations of a stronger ringgit as global interest rates fell. Going forward, market direction is likely to depend on the ability of the government to execute its infrastructure and stimulus programs. As US interest rates trend lower, a weaker dollar would also be positive for Malaysia along with signs of any acceleration in China's economic growth.

Singapore

Favorable global trends and a moderation in headline inflation (2.2% in August, 2.4% in July) drove positive market performance for the third quarter of 2024. The moderation of inflation raised hopes for easier monetary policy by the Monetary Authority of Singapore. Later in the quarter, China's announcement of a wide-ranging stimulus program and an interest rate cut by the US Federal Reserve also boosted sentiment.

Philippines

A 25 basis points cut in the Philippine central bank's key policy rate in August — the first since November 2020 — was a key market driver. The central bank expects inflation to start trending down and guided for another cut in October or December which should lower borrowing costs, ease credit access, and boost the economy. Future market movements are likely to depend on developments in US interest rates, domestic inflation, and prospects for further monetary easing by the central bank.

Indonesia

Investors liked the resilience of Indonesia's economy which was reflected in second quarter GDP growth of 5.05% — the third consecutive quarter of growth above 5%. The strengthening of the rupiah also boosted market sentiment. This strengthening was mainly in response to the prospect of lower global interest rates, but also reflected rising market confidence in the incoming and pro-growth Prabowo administration.

Thailand

In recent years, Thailand's economy lagged regional peers because of high household debt and borrowing costs as well as weak exports to China, its top trading partner. To spur growth, the ruling Thai Pheu Party recently announced handouts of $280 per person for 45 million people. This is part of its $14 billion stimulus program with first handouts just transmitted digitally. This action is expected to contribute 35 basis points to GDP growth, forecasted to be around 3% in 2024. Thailand is forecasting 36 million foreign tourist arrivals in 2024, which is up from 35 million in 2023 but still below the pre-pandemic level of 40 million.
